Director Resignation

Metgasco (ASX:MEL) advises that Mr Richard (“Rick”) Wood has resigned as an Executive Director of the Company. The Company has been advised by Rick that he is retiring to focus on other business interests.

Rick joined the Company in May 2004 as Operations Director and has since that time made a significant contribution to the development of the operations team in the area of surface and subsurface engineering and establishing a platform for future activity. Metgasco Managing Director David Johnson said “Rick joined the Company with a very solid background. His career commenced in 1968 at Esso with the development of Bass Strait. Both in his time at Esso and later at Ampolex he was involved in a number of benchmark engineering achievements such as Wandoo offshore north western Australia and the early development of the Kutubu oil field in PNG. The company is grateful for his involvement and has appreciated his skill and experience “

The Directors of Metgasco will seek to appoint a new Director to replace the vacancy created by Rick Wood
